

---

A Mouse By The House - Kids Story Poems

Kids are always interested in hearing some good kids stories today. Kids books are usually full of life lessons, colorful characters and fun filled places that help to grab your child's attention. Bedtime stories, kids poems and other kids stories are a big part of children learning and developing creativity and imagination. Many kids poems, preschool stories and books for kids teach children about some sort of life lesson or morals. Other times, many of these are just fun, silly rhymes to help make learning fun for your children. Kids poems and stories play a big part in daycares and preschools everywhere, helping children to have a laugh and smile.

A Mouse by the House

A Children's Poem - By author: Artie Knapp A mouse in the grass ran about, Stopping by the water spout. Nibbling on something I could barely see, And didn't seem to notice me. Not realizing he was trapped, He just chewed on his meal tightly wrapped. To get the mouse's attention, I threw a pebble his way, But he kept to his meal without sway. Again and again I tried, but to no effect; Feeling put-off and puzzled by his disrespect. But something changed inside me, as the mouse finally looked up; His eyes were innocent and curious, like that of a newborn pup. He didn't seem to mind, my being there; Barely gave a look, much less a stare. Then off he went back to the grass, nary a glance at me; I learned later he got glasses, and now can clearly see.

A Mouse By The House-Kids Story Poems