COMPOSITION

1- Energy

Energy is such an important thing in life. All living things need energy for life. When we walk, our bodies need energy to move from place to another. Similarly, when we come by car, the engine burns benzene or diesel to produce energy. Every thing we do requires energy.

There are two kinds of fuel which are renewable and nonrenewable. Nonrenewable runs out and it is produced from charcoal gas and oil, however, renewable energy never runs out and it is produced from the sun as solar energy from the wind, a tom and wastes. No doubt, renewable energy is cheaper and more practical than nonrenewable fuel.

Actually, with no source of energy life will be difficult as we can't use modern technology, live in darkness, students are affected as well as all household.

Finally, I would like to remind that we should make maximum use of the available renewable sources for now and the future.

2- Food

We all know that we need food for life. Actually, all living things need food and water in order to survive we can live without food for three or four weeks and without water for two or three days. Our bodies need the substances in food for growth, for repairing the body and keeping it healthy.

There are six types of nutrients which are; proteins which build cells, carbohydrates and fats which provide the body with energy, different vitamins, minerals and water. All these nutrients should be in a balanced diet.

There is a proverb that says. An apple a day keeps the doctor away. And I say balanced diet means healthy, happy and long life.

٢ - Helen Keller

Helen Keller was an American author and lecturer who was able to overcome great physical hardships. She suffered a serious illness and she became blind, deaf and dumb before she was two years old. However, she did not give up hope. She struggled very hard in order to live an active and useful life.

In her first book, 'The story of My life', she tells us of her early childhood which was at first gloomy and sad. She was desperate until something happened which completely changed her life. The third of march 1887 was a day which she would remember for a long time. In 1888 Helen traveled to Boston with her mother and her teacher. There she joined a special institute for the blind. She soon developed feelings of happiness and security, finding herself amongst children of her own age who were also blind. Helen now had only one problem which she had to solve. She could no longer bear to remain silent and communicate with people only by making signs or by writing. She wanted to make sounds. Before she became blind and deaf she had been able to speak but she had eventually lost this ability, too. Learning to speak was not impossible for a person like Helen with strong will power and determination.

٣ - Women and Food Technology

All over the world, providing food is regarded as a women's job. Women's Knowledge of food production and food processing and preparation enables them to feed their families even in difficult climatic and environmental conditions. Yet all too often in the past their skills have been ignored.

We have good example of this here in the Sudan. One case study, for example, showed that some Sudanese women possess a wealth of scientific knowledge of food fermentation.

Fermentation is a valuable method of food preservation. It also improves the digestion of food. Sudanese women can make about sixty different types of fermented food products, prepared from many types of grains. Of these, about thirty are made from sorghum or millet.
