Introduction

The purpose of this document is to log every single “gurame” moment that has occurred in holoEN history. To help facilitate your understanding of the material, I have curated this introductory portion of the document, of which includes a more comprehensive rationale, a discussion of the methods, and an appendix with definitions (and other fun stats) for key terms used throughout the paper. You may skip ahead, if you are only interested in the timestamps themselves (via the table of contents).

Rationale

This was simply done “for fun”, I’m not necessarily a full-blown /u/schizo; I definitely think that there’s a low chance that they actually end up together. I do, however, think that as long as there’s a chance - there’s a way. And love finds a way. Gender or sex is phenotypical, it’s something that adds onto someone’s physical makeup and their reproductive capacities. Consequently, then, it may be a critical factor in someone’s ideal mate. However, at the end of the day, it’s as superficial and surface-level as any other physical trait, such as beauty or stature. Enduring, enjoyable relationships rely not only on the physical appearance of your mate, but also upon their personality - what’s inside. I know it sounds cheesy, but really, a pretty face can only remain a pretty face for a certain period of time. The sex will get boring, your time together will lose that “magic”, and you’ll find yourself less interested over time. You need to have similar personalities, interests, backgrounds, whatever, and Gura and Amelia overlap in many of those aspects. Of course, you can’t be too similar - there needs to be some contrast and distinctiveness, after all, the age old colloquialism “opposites attract” holds true even beyond its immediate application to physical principles. Thankfully, this idea also holds true for Gura and Amelia. They have a different sense of humor, their taste/interests in things don’t always align perfectly (see: games), etc. As such, they won’t have a perfect relationship - constantly gushing and professing their love for the other, spending time with one another, having discord sex every night, etc. etc. That’s good, though. Relationships grounded in such a momentary burst of raw sexual lust have never worked out well - they’re shallow and fleeting. They should have their share of conflicts and arguments, because those lows will only serve to emphasize the highs that they will reach.

To conclude: I truly believe, from the annals of my schizophrenic mind, that Gura and Amelia are in the midst of a budding relationship. They’ve found that special someone. Though I recognize that it will likely not progress into anything serious, I sincerely hope I’m wrong.

Methods

Compiling this document took approximately 200~ hours or so. It is by no means perfect, there are definitely missing timestamps - especially in the earlier streams (prior to the first month of November).

The general criteria to be timestamped

- Any mention of the other girl in a solo stream (i.e. if Gura mentions Ame/Amelia/Watson, if Ame mentions Gura - of course this can range from a simple mention of their name to a full-blown /u/schizo moment)
- Any kino /u/baiting moments between the two in a collab (usually covered by clippers, as will be described later).
- Full collabs excluded, most gurame collabs excluded with the excuse of: "I'm fucking lazy, go watch the whole thing" or "the clips have it all covered". Though I will say that there are some kino timestamps that many people missed from the gurame collabs that have been included.

The general framework for timestamping was as follows (most of this was done with my shitty 1 course knowledge of python):

1. Select video (started from the most recent video at the time of beginning this document - A Way Out Part 2)
2. Filter comments for any mentions of keywords: "gura", "Gura", "GURA", "Ame", "ame", "AME", "amelia", "AMELIA", "Amelia", "amesame", "AmeSame".
3. From filtered list, filter for timestamp keyword ":"
4. Review second filtered list, appropriate clips added to document with a one/two sentence descriptor.

If the second filtered list did not contain any items, I manually reviewed the entire video on 2x speed, using my shitty attentional capacity for any mentions of "gura" or "ame", depending on whose stream it was. (using the auto-generated CC as a scraper was wildly inconsistent).

Note: this second method (manually reviewing each video) is obviously subject to attentional lapses, and was not done for certain videos (primarily, very early videos from the first two weeks of debut excluding the debut streams themselves, and any of Amelia's fucking ungodly long streams that lasted 4h+).

Also note: membership streams are excluded since I'm a lazy fuck that doesn't want to download 2h+ member streams with my shit bootleg internet and then have to clip them and upload them.

Document Layout

Four Sections:

1. Clips (I compiled most of the clips from when I first started this document, there aren't many but they include a lot of the /u/ moments from collabs. This is mostly for new gurame users to get an introduction to the material).
2. Gura Timestamps (in ascending order from earliest to most recent stream)
3. Amelia Timestamps (in ascending order from earlier to most recent stream)
4. Timestamps from other streams (usually kiara's streams)

Each timestamp will be given with a general descriptor of what happens.

Example: "Amelia WAAAATSON"

Bolded clips are clips that I find personally very enjoyable. Some clips do not have descriptors and are just the timestamp link - those are usually just boring Amelia/Gura mentions with no real /u/ substance.

Appendix

Key Terms (very limited spoonfeeding)

Gurame - gura and amelia's canonical ship name.

Some random numbers

There are 916 timestamps in this document, excluding clipshit.

Gura has mentioned Amelia 411 times on her streams (all streams hosted on her channel, note that these numbers are approximate as not all timestamps are explicit mentions - most are).

That is 4 (3.95) times per stream, on average (N = 104).

She has mentioned Amelia the most on her Minecraft: Guerilla (Jan 08) stream (21).

Amelia has mentioned Gura 444 times on her solo streams (all streams hosted on her channel, note that these numbers are approximate as not all timestamps are explicit mentions - most are).

That is 2 (2.38) times per stream, on average (N = 186).

She has mentioned Gura the most on her New Year's Event stream (54).

(Just going off of my very fallacious memory capabilities, I can confidently say that Gura and Amelia definitely mention one another the most, when compared to any other holoEN girl. Ina is definitely 2nd for both of them on their solo streams, in terms of mentioning frequency, though it's definitely a lot less. Ina gets mentioned quite frequently on Minecraft solo streams, but is rarely mentioned on any other game or stream.)

Disclaimer: Member streams are excluded, for the sole reason that I have shit internet + I'm too lazy to download, trim, and then upload. Some worthy /u/ member streams include:

- MK8, Ukulele practice (Amelia)
- Thanksgiving date, first two membership karaokes (Gura)

51 Clubhouse Games vs. A Way Out (Gurame)

“People often say gurame a way out is their best collab.

i would have to respectfully disagree.

the a way out collabs were excellent - don't get me wrong, but there just wasn't much dialog, zatsudan, and the majority of the stream was carried by the kino narrative storytelling.

on the other head, a stream that had peak gurame chemistry, kino discourse, cute interactions, and minimal kayfabe was: the gurame 51 collab.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=41jBh3ueyBs>

why? let me present a few premises.

the stream was almost entirely a zatsudan among holoEN, it's quite rare to see two individuals have the intimacy required to defer towards zatsudan, off-topic chatting, as two friends would; rather than game-relevant talk.

although this is a capacity that gurame has often demonstrated, it is definitely most evident in this stream. much of the stream is spent talking about their past, present activities, etc. this stands in stark contrast to a way out, where a lot of the talking was directed towards the game itself.

both gura and ame acted like themselves: minimal kayfabe.

related to premise #1, a common issue with gura on her non-member streams is her reluctance to drop her kayfabe, for good reason. this stream, however, is one of the rare streams (even moreso than member streams) in which gura really just peeled off the kayfabe.

all the properties of her voice changed, and she seemed to be enjoying herself - not feeling obligated to speak, just having a fun time talking with amelia. this also applies to ame - though to a lesser degree, as she is already quite genuine on stream.

kino banter was at an all-time high is it the nature of the game, or is it just their close bond? its both. 51 collabs with other holoEN members really don't see as much kino banter and shit-talking as the collab involving these two. again, it demonstrates their closeness and comfort with one another - a common theme that permeates this collab.

citation (just a few examples for this one, there's a lot):

9. <https://youtu.be/41jBh3ueyBs?t=2219>
10. <https://youtu.be/41jBh3ueyBs?t=3225>

now, a way out had its fair share of banter during the minigames - but it definitely was lacking in this department relative to the constant bants in this stream.

both ame and gura enjoyed it significantly.

being a chummate i have caught many of their streams, and it is without a doubt that at least for a collab - this was the most enjoyable stream they've had.

just look at what ame tweeted after the game

<https://twitter.com/watsonameliaEN/status/1326794967394684928>

post-stream:

<https://youtu.be/41jBh3ueyBs?t=11209> ("it was really a lot of fun") and this comes to no surprise, she was laughing so frequently - and the laughs were genuine.

listen to this laugh (from the collab, few examples again):

<https://youtu.be/41jBh3ueyBs?t=967>

<https://youtu.be/41jBh3ueyBs?t=2288>

and a more artificial laugh from somewhere else:

<https://youtu.be/1w0Jb9cr0xs?t=897>

some closing remarks on 51 vs. a way out:

if you want a total stream experience, a way out is the total package. the chemistry is still 10/10, and the game itself perfectly complements both of the girls, and really propels the stream to new heights. the stream is really only special, however, if you haven't watched a way out before.

whereas, if you want pure comfort, coziness, and PEAK gurame chemistry: look no further than the 51 collab. it puts on full display, the intimacy the two have - and how close they are."

Bonus!

Author's Note

Thanks for reading! This is just a little summary about my thoughts on the whole /u/ dilemma in /hlgg/, my opinion on other Gura/Amelia ships, and the future of this document.

/u/posting definitely isn't for everyone. For some, it'll immediately enhance the entertainment value of the thread, for others, it'll derail it. Though I think that /u/ is inseparable from the core identity of hololive and the product it tries to be, I do believe that the thread can be better if the tribalism between yuriships is toned down. I do shitpost from time to time, claiming Gurame is the superior ship (which it is), but I'm not going to immediately get my pantsu in a twist and start giving (Yous) to everyone that has a differing opinion. At the end of the day, I enjoy Gura and Amelia. I also enjoy Ina, Mori, and Kiara, though I do not catch them as frequently. It's important to remember that your oshi wants to become better friends with everyone, not just one individual in particular. So when Gura collabs with other EN or even hololive (kek) members, and has a blast doing it, I'm having a great time. Iname, Sametori, and Calligula, all of them can co-exist peacefully alongside Gurame.

Unfortunately, I don't have the time nor the adequate autism to continue updating this document with rigor. As such, I am sharing it all with you in hopes that either someone can continue and improve upon it, or it can at least be a reference point for shippers. That is not to say that I won't continue updating this document, though it'll probably be reduced to very periodic updates with only the most important (if there is any) timestamps making it in. I do not wish for this document to be used to fuel tribalist shipwars, though I do not mind if someone wants to use the timestamps in this document to have logical, level-headed, argumentative discourse with another anon on the relationship dynamics of 5 females in a virtual youtubing generation.
