

Verdict Based On Fourth Posts

I've gone into this 4th set of posts with a win for Scoobless and in these points there isn't anything new at all. It seems to be mostly rehashed arguments each time.

We have the same Jade being weak to Wood or not again when we know that you can't transfer feats between characters. With the only new things being that Scoobless has posted a scan of Jade outright declaring her weakness to Wood and Abhi saying Jade did the same things Alan did to overcome the weakness to Wood. But Abhi hasn't proved this so I can't back him up here.

We have the same argument about draining where why was Jade not able to drain her energy back to manipulate the shield and Abhi says that she didn't have the power at the moment. And he isn't going to question why or how.

We also have the same arguments about whether Abhi should be able to use the High Herald version of Starheart or not when it should actually be the Low Herald version. It can be nothing but that. So repeating the same arguments over and over again isn't worth it.

We have the same argument about Starhawk stalemating the Keeper and in all honesty we know they said we can't handle him. If Starhawk was truly that powerful he could've fought the Keeper on his own back.

We also had the same arguments about speed again where Abhi doesn't seem to be recognising the problem. Abhi seems to keep on arguing that he doesn't think Jade could shoot from point to point easily. Scoobless has already conceded that Jay isn't as fast but what Scoobless has said and proven right is that Jay Garrick is eons ahead when it comes to reaction speed and performing tasks at high speeds. It's simply a non-argument at this point. Abhi should have dedicated this time to showing reaction speed feats instead of going from Point A to Point B. Scoobless has just provided so many feats that just put him on such a high level compared to Abhi's amalgam it's silly. It's pointless trying to argue speed at this point.

Abhi again brings up sapping Jays momentum but again he hasn't provided scans of who could do such a thing so I can't take his comment on it.

We also have the same old arguments about Starhawk's precognitive abilities. It's again a point that is just being repeated over and over again. Starhawk is in a completely neutral Universe so he won't have any recollection of any past events and nor will he be able to predict the future here. And there hasn't been enough proof to prove that Starhawk would be able to tell what is happening in a fight. It just hasn't been proven enough.

We have the arguments about Amora holding the Vision in place and in reality I think that if Vision wanted to he could have phased through the shackles and he didn't, it's a complicated issue to look at.

We also have the point about Starhawk being affected by Ghost Rider, a being composed of mystical energy and he also again couldn't tell what was going to happen. It might seem like I am being picky here but considering Abhi has made his argument entirely on the principle that Starhawk is always going to what will happen. And going by all the fights he has been in this isn't the case. The argument just falls apart here.

A new argument would be the crystal ball trick used by Dazzler on the Enchantress, from what I can see if Dazzler wanted to blind the Enchantress why didn't she just shine the light at her instead? Although Abhi did provide the scan of Starhawk omitting a light source described as being like a living star so it could be possible that Abhi's amalgam could blind Scoobless's amalgam but I don't think he could do it fast enough.

Although Abhi does have a point when he says he could track the amalgam when he could use Jade's ability to track someone via their heat signature.

Abhi also tried to say that Enchantress's hypnotism on Red Onslaught wasn't that good (he didn't word it that way) since the control was broken on the next page but as we know from the scans it was only broken due to Amora being distracted. Otherwise the Red Onslaught would have been under Amora's control.

Abhi makes reference to Starhawk's resistance to TP as his mind was apparently resistant to Mantis (who he hasn't provided speed feats for) and he says about Moondragon. But as we know it was a newborn mind for Moondragon so she was clearly nowhere near what she usually is. So using that example doesn't really help his argument at all.

The point that I think Scoobless has made quite well is the fact that the Enchantress's "TP" isn't really TP. And as Scoobless proves he shows Vision being completely resistant to TP and the Enchantress is able to take complete control of him. It helps because Abhi was basing his argument on the fact that Magneto's helmet would be able to block out the Enchantress but since the Enchantress's telepathy doesn't seem to be conventional telepathy so it would affect Magneto in just the same way.

One of the points I am kind of not entirely with Scoobless on is Enchantress shielding the minds from Xavier. Oddly enough Xavier was trying hard to reach into their minds and couldn't. But to be honest I might be incorrect with what I say here. But it could be correct in that she was able to cut off their minds from Xavier's.

And finally I will finish by saying that Abhi does show Magneto being able to block attacks from Doom. Abhi does state that Doom is a much better magician than Enchantress but that doesn't really switch my mind either way because he hasn't proven anything else other than that.

Verdict

In short I think Scoobless takes it again because the same kind of points have been reiterated again and again and in some cases it's only been made worse for Abhi especially when it comes to speed and mind control. Although Abhi does have an opportunity when it comes to blinding Enchantress. And perhaps Magneto's shield blocking teleportation. But when it comes to the overall Battlezone etiquette but I don't think I can give Abhi the win entirely based on that.