

Immigration Letter of Marriage Support

There are a lot of documents that you need to file with your application when seeking residency through marriage. One of them is the immigration letter of marriage support.

Immigration letter of marriage support is basically a letter written by someone close to the couple who tells the immigration that the couple are in a legitimate marriage and they support their claim to seek residency for the spouse.

This letter can be written by anyone who is close to the couple. They do not have to be a resident or citizen of the United States. They could live in any country and still present themselves as a witness to the well-intentioned marriage and support their petition to allow the spouse to gain US residency through marriage.

So your friends, family members, and even church members can write Immigration letter of marriage support.

Most immigration attorneys will tell you though that an immigration letter of marriage support carries little weight. It is much better to show other documents proving the legitimacy of relationship and the intertwined nature of coexistence.

For example, you are way better off showing that you have a child together or have joint finances or purchased a property together, along with proof of traveling together, visiting each other's family, spending time with common friends, vacationing, and so on.

However, at time you may not be able to provide other supporting documents or may need an immigration letter of marriage support in addition to other documents. So be sure to speak with your immigration attorney and put your strongest papers in front of the immigration officer. It is not worth taking a chance when it comes to immigration.

An immigration attorney will be able to guide you as to what documents you should put together. And if you do need an immigration letter of marriage support, they will be able to guide you how make a strong immigration letter of marriage support.