About the project

Animals need to be treated better than they currently are, and with our project, we want to show young people a respectful, responsible and compassionate attitude towards animals. In a world where the capitalistic mentality prevails, and everything must be produced fast and in big quantities, companies often uncompromisingly maximize their profits, often forgetting about social responsibility and sustainable development. The collateral damage is a huge amount of violence and torture and disrespect for animal rights.

Due to the economic regulation and fast-paced lifestyle, it is difficult to find a place for compassion and responsibility and respect today treatment of animals, so we want to create this space with our project.

The issue of animal protection is most urgent in the fields of the meat industry, pharmacy, cosmetics, etc. where the animals are treated as means for generating a profit. Animals are exploited in experiments or suffer a similar fate where they are exploited or tortured. The attitude towards animals as pets is also problematic, which results in an ever-increasing number of abandoned animals (dogs, cats and other pets).

With our project, we want to address the problem of abuse, torture and irresponsible treatment of animals, more concretely these are the issues of animal testing, disrespect for the rights of animals in the economy, poor care, torture, discarded animals etc. Together with the participants, we want to creatively address these problems, point them out, talk about them and to look for improvements and possibilities for a better tomorrow. We want to support young people in their desire to help animals, we want to help them encourage a compassionate attitude towards animals and show them a responsible way of treating them. We want to show them what ways they are possible for a better, higher quality and fair way of life for all beings in harmony with nature.
