The Alarm Has Sounded -Scheme Z Is Coming!

by Kathy Giordano

The battle cry has been sounded. Combatants are armed and ammunition has been stockpiled. Battle lines have been drawn and the alarm has been sounded -"Scheme Z is coming!"

The combatants, 350 Charlestownians vs. the Massachusetts Department of Public Works (MDPW), gathered on Nov. 15 at the present-day equivalent of a 17th century town hall, the Knights of Columbus. The boisterous crowd of residents informed the state that the proposed Central Artery interchange plan for this neighborhood is unacceptable. The state informed the residents that Scheme Z is the best plan for connecting the Central Artery to Routes 1 and I-93. There lie the battle lines.

Representatives of both sides of the issue have armed themselves with experts and documentation. A stockpile of blueprints and engineering studies have been gathered to fight each opponent's point of view.

The first major skirmish of the Battle of Scheme Z saw no fatalities but wounds were inflicted by piercing words from Undersecretary of Transportation Matt Coogan toward townsfolk. He was chastized by Rose D'Ambrosio of Union Street to "stop telling us how good you are to us," to which he replied. "I'll tell you what I like."

The town wasn't in the mood to believe what it was being told. It was evident to them that a proposed highway connection that would stand 11 stories high, 700 feet wide and hold 18 lanes of traffic didn't fit into their

The Alarm Has Sounded — Scheme Z Is Coming!

quiet Charlestown residential lifestyle. A massive overpass that would cover land space equal to the size of the Boston Common and would cast shadows over one-quarter of the total onemile area of Charlestown was just cause, in the eyes of residents, to take a stand and fight.

The citizenry was joined by Rep. Sal DiMasi, former City Councillor Frederick Langone, Boston Transportaion Commissioner Richard Diminio and Charlestown Neighborhood Council Chairman Dennis Mc-Laughlin, all testifying against the proposal.

Representatives from the offices of Congressman Joseph Kennedy, Rep. Richard Voke, Mayor Raymond Flynn, City Councillor Robert Travaglini, the Boston Redevelopment Authority, the New England Aquarium and the Economic Development and Industrial Corporation, were in attendance listening to the concerns and issues raised at the forum.

The North Area Task Force (NATF), a group of residents active in the development plans for the Central Artery/North Area (CANA) project for over 10 years, and the newly formed Citizens for a Livable Charlestown (CLC) were present, as were 14 members of the Charlestown Neighborhood Council.

MDPW, Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel and CANA project personnel sat with state consultants
from Childs, Bertman
Tsekares and Casendino (CBT). Intermingled between the elected, the appointed and the hired were the residents of Charlestown who displayed patience and perseverance on their taut, determined faces.

The parley was moderated by CBT architect Anthony Casendino, who performed admirably. Assisting Coogan was Central Artery Director William Twomey.

Visuals in the form of maps and graphs were utilized by the MDPW. The much-traveled model of Scheme Z was displayed to give the attendees an overall view of the proposed project that encompasses land between Rutherford Avenue, the Cambridge city line, the Gilmore Bridge and North Station.

The CLC counteracted the MDPW presentation with continually changing visual projections on the wall, displaying facts and figures as well as architectural renditions of the planned highway as seen from the community.

Coogan stated that the MDPW listened to Charlestown residents when they first discussed the plans in the 1970s and told the state "the engineers are wrong," and asked them to "find a better way to connect the roadway." He stated: "The outcome was putting the loop ramps 500 feet away from the community. The citizens came up with the current idea to put the loops over Boston Sand and Gravel." He said that after developing a whole series of solutions, Scheme Z was the best plan to connect the projects.

Residents wanted to know why there is the big rush to have Scheme Z approved by the Federal Highway Administration. DiMasi requested that the state "give more time to allow the community an opportunity to have input." He stated: "Even if the outcome is more costly, once its up, it's there forever."

Why not have the entire highway connection placed underground? What about the affects of air and noise pollution on the neighborhood? What about the increase of vehicle traffic on Charlestown streets? Have you conducted a study that would include the impacts that would be felt in the community by the total construction and development projects as well as the pollution that currently exists from Boston Edison, Boston Sand and Gravel, the MBTA garages and other industrial companies in and around Charlestown?

A late decision by the state to remove the Traverse Street ramp from the connection would cause the increase of thousands of vehicles traveling onto the North Washington Street bridge and ultimately onto Charlestown streets. McLaughlin stated: "I found the prior Z Scheme an injury to the community. The modified scheme adds insult to that injury by taking out that ramp."

GETTING PREQUALIFIED FOR A LOAN

Many lenders help prospective buyers to get prequalified for a mortgage loan before they begin a serious house-hunting effort. You sit down with a loan officer, give all of the information about your assets, income and debt, and they can tell you how much of a mortgage you will be able to get under the various loan plans being offered. For a nominal fee, they will do a credit check. If there are any problems with your credit rating, you and the lender can work together to straighten things out.

If your lender prequalifies you, it make you much more attractive to the seller when you do find a home. If you are competing with other buyers, it will be helpful if you have included with your offer a letter from your lender showing you've already begun the loan application process and appear to be qualified to buy the house. It will also save you and your Realtor a lot of time by eliminating from consideration homes you would not be able to afford.

Monument Properties is happy to serve all of your real estate needs. If you are planning a move, call us at 241-9500 or stop by our offices at 85 Warren St. in Charlestown.

News From The Charlestown Boys & Girls Club 15 GREEN ST.

CLUB HOURS — FRIDAY, NOV. 23

On Friday, Nov. 23, the clubhouse will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the Green Street side of the club. The Teen Center and gymnasium will open from noon to 7 p.m.

DECATHLON — SATURDAY, NOV. 24

On Saturday, Nov. 24, there will be a Decathlon for all club members 13 to 18 sponsored by the Keystone Club. Sign-up begins at noon that day and the activities start at 1 p.m. The competition will be for two-member teams, and the cost per team is $6. The events will include volleyball, soccer, pie-eating, obstacle course, wheelbarrow race, egg race, ping pong and more. Everyone had a great time last year, especially with the pie-eating contest and, in fact, the club received a national award from Boys Clubs of America for program excellence as a result. We hope as many as possible will come join in the fun.

SANTA'S KITCHEN

Congratulations to all the club members who participated in the spoon decorating for Project Bread. Over 350 wooden spoons were decorated by club members this past week and each spoon will now hang on a tree outside of downtown Filene's. Each spoon can be purchased for $10, and this money will then be distributed by Project Bread to area soup kitchens and food pantries for the holidays. We are very proud of all our members who gave some time and energy to others more needy than themselves. I'd say the holiday spirit has arrived at the club.

FAMILY DAY — SATURDAY, DEC. 1

Saturday, Dec. 1 is Family Day at the Charlestown Boys & Girls Club and we'd like to invite the families of all our club members to stop by and participate in some of the activities. In the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, it can be easy to forget that sometimes the greatest gift we can give our children is our time. So we invite all the moms, dads, aunts and uncles to take a little time on Saturday, Dec. 1 to stop by the club with your whole family, including those under 6, and play! From noon until 3 p.m. there will be the opportunity for basketball, arts & crafts, miniature golf, a splash party and treasure hunt in the pool, ping pong, floor hockey, ceramics and computers. We also hear that Howie Bunkley's Chef's Club is planning something special for everyone who stops by. We hope as many families as possible can join us for some fun this day.

CHRISTMAS TREE SALES

The Boys & Girls Club will again be selling Christmas trees in order to raise money for our programs. We hope that everyone who supported us by purchasing a tree or wreath in previous years will do so again this year. Please note that we will open our stand on Saturday, Dec. 8. Weekend hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and weekday hours will be 4 to 8 p.m. Thank you for your help.

NATF Co-Chairman Ken Stone stated: "We had 10 years of discussions with the state on the CANA project. We can have the same impact on Scheme Z, but we must stay on top of them."

Dimino said that the state's decision to remove the Traverse Street ramp from the highway system results in 500 vehicles traveling over the North Washington Street bridge during peak hours and into City Square. He said: "Because the state proposes to eliminate a left turn, all traffic will go up Rutherford Avenue and lead into Somerville," adding "or traffic will take a right hand turn onto local streets and back into City Square." He continued: "We took two years to design a system to keep traffic off Charlestown streets and we now ask the state to reconsider its decision to remove this vital ramp."

unsatisfactory to the residents who started to leave the meeting in disgust. Along with this discouragement was the added dismay of the community when they felt they were being mistreated. As one resident loudly requested: "Treat us with some respect."

When the meeting came to its conclusion, very few of the attendees were left in the hall. The MDPW stated that they would be back, and the community informed them that "we have just begun to fight."

The past has met the present. This David vs. Goliath story was played out in 1775. At that time a small group of Charlestownians fought hard and courageously against the mightiest army in the world. That battle was lost — but the ultimate victory was won. This first encounter was neither won nor lost.

The naivete of a sleeping community has been awakened to a concerned and better informed force to be reckoned with. The Battle of Scheme Z will surely be enlisting recruits on both sides in the weeks to come. Will Charlestown be the victor or the vanquished?

Only time will tell.

Mayor Says Elimination Of Traverse Street Ramp Not Acceptable Nov. 17, 1990

Frederick P. Salvucci, secretary Executive Office of

Transportation and Construction 10 Park Plaza

Boston, MA 02116

Dear Secretary Salvucci:

This morning I met with several representatives from Charlestown to discuss their concerns relative to the environmental and traffic impacts of the state's proposed design of the Central Artery project, specifically Scheme Z and the Traverse Street ramp. These concerns were also presented to your staff at the public meeting in Charlestown on Thursday [Nov. 15].

It is my understanding that in the Final Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement (FEIS) filed yesterday [Nov. 16], the state eliminated the Traverse Street ramp from Scheme Z. Elimination of this ramp, which was done unilaterally and without notice, is a significant change that came at the very end of a long design process and, therefore, little time was afforded to review its impact.

Our preliminary analysis indicates that over 2,100 vehicles would use the Travers Street ramp in the PM peak hour, traveling to I-93 and Route 1. Without this ramp, the only alternatives for northbound traffic are ramps located at Leverett Circle and City Square. As a result, traffic that would otherwise use this ramp will be diverted to a number of sensitive locations where congestion problems currently exist or are anticipated. This will significantly increase congestion and degrade air quality in sections of Charlestown and the North End, and will severely hinder emergency access to Charlestown.

After hearing the concerns of Charlestown residents, both this morning and at the meeting on Thursday, it is the city's position that restoration of the Traverse Street ramp to the project's design is crucial to alleviate the negative impact on air quality, public safety and the overall quatity of life for Charlestown residents.

While I recognize the state's concern relative to the potential negative impact to 4(F) property [parklands] in the Charles River Basin, I do not agree that the local connection is of lesser importance. I believe that the state needs to work to identify a satisfactory alternative. Merely eliminating this important ramp to the detriment of the residents of Charlestown and the North End is not acceptable.

I am committed to continuing to work with you to find that alternative. I am confident that our mutual goals can be achieved.

Bay State

Sincerely, Raymond L. Flynn Mayor of Boston

(A story based on the following facts has appeared in this space before, but, as more than a decade has drifted by since its last telling, I would like to take the time to tell it again. Though facts can sometimes be altered by time, the tale is as true as I remember it.)

Last week I won a turkey. Forty years ago this week I won a turkey. Any similarity between these two events ends right there, for my turkey of forty years ago was as different to my turkey of last week as day is to night.

Several days ago my name was drawn from a cardboard box at the local Knights of Columbus and for this I was awarded a Thanksgiving bird. Plain and simple. Game, set and match. That once honorable beast will grace the holiday table at my parent's home on Elm Street as did my conquest of four decades ago, but things are sure to be much different this time around. This time, I think we may enjoy the fruits of my victory.

It was in the fall of 1950, perhaps 1951, when the Boys Club was about to begin its annual Turkey Shoot. The pressed wood target, which pictured a huge turkey with varying numeric values encircled strategically across its body. was taken from the storeroom where it had been placed one year before. For five cents, members were given the opportunity of tossing three darts at the target. The total value of the darts the shooters were able to amass from the three throws was placed beside the shooter's name. The name and the score were then posted on the games' room bulletin board. When another shooter's score exceeded the one posted, his name would replace the previous leader's.

Much to the chagrin of my entire family, my name stayed atop the leader's board throughout the entire contest, and Vini, Vidi, Vici! I came, I saw and I conquered.

"Wonderful," you might say! A free Thanksgiving turkey when things around the old homestead weren't exactly prosperous would be a welcomed prize, would it not? Wrong! Wrong! Wrong!

The fact the turkey was LIVE, feathers, gobble and all, bothered me not in the least, but to my parents I was not exactly a conquering hero. To understand their reasoning, a bit of background information is necessary to enlighten the reader as to the reasons for the feelings of my family. (It would be erroneous on my part to include my entire family on the negative side of this issue, for I had two younger brothers who were just as excited about a LIVE turkey as I was.) The anti-turkey segment was actually a triumvirate consisting of my mother, my father and my older (GET THAT THING OUT OF HERE!) sister.

About two weeks before the actual Turkey Shoot winners were announced. the birds were brought to the club in a huge wooden cage and placed upon the games room stage for all to see. Although set there strictly for reasons of observation, it was not long before more intricate amuse-

Not being a part of their regular diet, old cigarette butts, chewed pieces of Double Bubble Gum and half-eaten B.B. Bats have been known to do that to turkeys.

The special night finally arrived, and before a vast audience of members and their parents, I was handed my turkey. His legs were bound in twine, but nothing stopped his wings from slapping me near silly as I descended the stage to the jubilant cheers of my friends. Why wasn't Dad smiling? be. Grown men don't cry. I was elated. I walked on air. For one whose total exposure to wild life prior to that evening was alley cats and stray puppy dogs, the thought of a LIVE TUR-KEY exhilarated me.

But my glee was not to last, for tonight, in Uncle Tom's old pre-war Plymouth, we would drive to the slaughter house in Chelsea to have the beast prepared for Thanksgiving dinner. From the very moment I first took the lead in the Turkey Shoot Contest, I had started to prepare myself for this eventuality, but by now he had become my friend. For days I had protected him from the uncaring hordes of members who were bent on feeding him anything they could scrape from the bottom of their shoes. I had sacrificed my own body while diving in front of flying objects hurled in his direction. We had become friends. He had come to trust me, and now I was on the very verge of Ah, but what the hell, we did need a turkey for Thanksgiving dinner!

As we drove toward the slaughter house, I found myself torn between friendship and hunger. Friendship seemed to be prevailing, and when we arrived to find the building closed for the evening, I was happy to know that my buddy my pal, had been granted a temporary stay of execution.

Dad was never one for vulgarity, but I did hear him say to Tom that night, "What the ##&X do we do now?'

One thing was for certain, we couldn't just let him go. No siree! The safety of a turkey on an urban street a couple days before Thanksgiving could not be guaranteed. There was no other choice. We had to take him home.

I had never seen that look on my mother's face before, and I am sure I have not seen it since.

"It's still alive!", she said as she fought valiantly, but unsuccessfully to lock the four of us out.

"We'll just leave him in the cellar for the night," Dad pleaded in my defense, 'and we'll take care of the necessary matters first thing in the morning."

I had heard Ma threaten to leave once or twice before, but this was the first time I actually saw her begin to pack her bags.

With a great deal of reluctance, though, she finally agreed to house the turkey in the old coal bin in the

"Just make sure his feet are tied," she said.

"And you," she shouted in my direction, "are responsible for cleaning up after him in the morning."

The turkey was placed in his appropriate place in the cellar and off to bed we went WITHOUT EVEN A THOUGHT OF MRS. MARTIN'S CAT. Mrs. Martin lived on the first floor and kept her cat in the Sometime during the wee hours of the morning, horrifying screams emanated from the cellar threatening to shatter windows and shiver the very timbers of the three decker. It was turkey versus cat, with the cat having a decided edge over the tied up tom. It was when we arrived back at the cellar in an attempt to break up the melee that I first saw the look on his face. He was angry, the cat was angry. and the noise was deafening, but his look was unmistakable.

"I want to die," it said, "I just want to die.'

The next day, after his head and feathers had been removed, it was quite apparent that the previous two weeks, coupled with the experience of the previous night, had taken its toll on my once-plump turkey. There couldn't have been much more than seven or eight pounds of him left, mostly bones, but he would, nonetheless, grace our Thanksgiving table.

I ate. My two younger brothers ate as though they were on a mission, but Ma, Dad and my older sister experienced their one and only vegetarian Thanksgiving.

"If it was walking around here yesterday," the triumvirate silently and secretly agreed, "we are not eating it today."

When I bring the newly won turkey to my parent's home this year, I am sure memories will be stirred, but appetites should not be diminished.

CALL FOR HELP! STOP SCHEME Z

Last Thursday night's meeting with the Massachusetts Department of Public Works opened many eyes as to the magnitude of the monster highway interchange known as Scheme Z. Reaching 11-stories in height and consisting of nearly eight miles of ramps over Charlestown, this structure is sure to impact the life of every Charlestown resident.

Now is the time to act if we hope to change this project. You must help by calling or writing every one of our elected officials to let them know how you feel.

The group of residents, Citizens For A Livable Charlestown, could also use additional support to continue their fight.

Interested people should call 242-3771.

Thanks For The Charlestown Family

Last week I got caught in a little bind. I needed a gym so the St. Catherine's seventh and eighth grade team could practice. I picked up the phone and called the Boys & Girls Club and I soon had a gym for these young people.

I thought out loud, what a great place Charlestown is. Everybody helps everybody! Sharing and caring have always been the hallmark of Charlestown.

As I travel around the town I see this Charlestown family spirit more and more from one end of the town to the other. Countless people put in countless hours for other people.

We have are ups and downs, but we certainly stick together. We stick together and we work together. There is a lot of love in Charlestown, and we just have to keep spreading it around.

Close to 375 years ago, Pilgrims came to the 'new world' aboard the Mayflower. They too worked together and stuck together. They too were a family, each caring and sharing for each other. They soon found that the Indians, the native Americans, also had this caring and sharing. The same caring and sharing they had.

Soon they would sit down together - Pilgrims and Indians, native Americans and new Americans - to give thanks for their many blessings, thanks for being alive, thanks for being together.

This week we commemorate that first Thanksgiving, and similarly we have the same things to be thankful for.

Thanksgiving is a family holiday and the Charlestown family has much to be thankful for. Enjoy your day, enjoy our day. Happy Thanksgiving, THANKSGIVING . . .

At this special time of year, we here at St. Catherine's School wish all our friends, supporters, parents and neighbors all the Blessings of Thanksgiving.

In our prayer, we thank God for our alumnus Joe Houlihan for all he is doing for us in Saudi Arabia.

FAST . .

On Nov. 15, students gathered in St. Catherine's Church for a Prayer Service coordinated by Sister Dorothy and students of grade eight. Students gave up snacks and viewed a film which clearly illustrated the needs of the hungry. There was a period of thanking God for His goodness and riches to us. Through sacrificial offerings, a donation will be made to a needy organization from St. Catherine's School.

MATH-A-THON . . .

T-shirts were awarded for participation in the Math-A-Thon sponsored by the St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital. Students receiving shirts were: Paul Daniels, Christine Keane, Rosetta Cannizzaro, Kevin Daniels, Anna Ogueke, Laurie Farrell, Timothy Brennan, Linda Rizzo, Joseph Wilkins, Paul Keane, Erin Carroll, Michelle Marino, Anuli Ogueke, Dat Tran, Gregory Masse and Tammy Biggins.

We thank all who sponsored our students in this endeavor.

LITURGY . . .

On Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 10 a.m., students will participate in a special Thanksgiving Liturgy. All students have special parts in this celebration. We here at SCS extend a welcome to parents, grandparents, neighbors and friends to join with us on Wednesday. Students will be dismissed following the Liturgy.

NEIGHBORS . . .

We thank Mary MacInnes and her friends for saving Foodmaster receipts and Pepsi Cola caps for us. Every little bit helps!

CONGRATULATIONS . . .

Rosetta Cannizzaro, a grade-six student, was notified that she is one of the finalists in the Steppingstone Scholars Program. We are proud of Rosetta and her academic and extracurricular accomplishments.

HOMETOWN SUPPORT . .

Students of grade two received letters from Jack McGona-

Kennedy Center To Sponsor Santa's Kitchen Spoon-Decorating Party

The Kennedy Center will host an "Intergenerational" spoon-decorating party at the Senior Lounge, 55 Bunker Hill St., on Thursday, Dec. 6 from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

Santa's Kitchen is Project Bread's unique holiday benefit that helps feed the hungry of Massachusetts. Project Bread receives donations for the decorated spoons which it in turn distributes to pantries, soup kitchens and social service agencies to help people during the holiday season. The spoons can be used as Christmas tree ornaments, gift box decorations or even given as gifts.

Charlestown residents of all ages are invited to this party. There should be plenty of spoons on hand but you may want to bring your own, especially if it's a wooden spoon. Donations of materials such as glitter.

ribbon, felt, glue, pipe cleaners, etc. would be greatly appreciated. This would be a great way to recycle your old arts and crafts materials that you didn't want to throw away!

Project Bread has helped those in need in Charlestown through the years. This is one way we can all give something back. Plan to attend, decorate a spoon, have some refreshments and start the holiday season off right by giving!

For more information or to donate materials, contact Denise Monks at 241-8866.

Minimum donations are $15, however, the more you contribute, the more events and festivities can be added to the walk.

All donations are tax deductible. Proceeds will go toward establishing a two-year scholarship for a Charlestown resident at Bunker Hill Community College.

Please fill out the form below and include it with a check payable to the Charlestown Christmas Walk Inc. and mail it to:

Chiropractic Patients Run New York Marathon

by Manuel Roman

The Santoro brothers, Steve and David, recently returned from New York City, both finishing that city's Marathon in laudable times. On the warm morning of Nov. 4, over 20,000 people lined up to start the grueling 26-mile race.

The men's winner, Douglas Wakiihuri from Kenya, finished the race in 2:12. The women's winner, Wanda Panfil of Poland, finished in 2:30. The heat conditions were detrimental to the participants, making the race that much more diffi-

Steve, a 34-year-old programmer/analyst with Fidelity Investments, finished the race in 3:52. This was his fourth marathon finish.

David, 27, has been a runner since he was 13. Currently working at Tucker Anthony, David, who is also a member of the National Guard, finished the marathon in 2:56. David ran throughout high school and college. He is at present a pre-chiropractic student at the University of Massachusetts in Boston and plans to attend Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa.

The Santoros have been training for the last few months and, as part of their plan for health and performance, they have been receiving chiropractic care at North End Chiropractic on Hanover Street in Boston. Dr. Kevin J. Loughlan, their chiropractor, says that with regular chiropractic "adjustments" the spine is able to stay in optimal alignment thus allowing the body's nervous system to function at its best capacity.

Athletes can benefit greatly from chiropractic care due to the frequent stress and strain their bodies are subject to. Maintaining good health has been the primary goal of the Doctor of Chiropractic since 1895. Balance is the key word. A body out of balance or in misalignment is subject not only to pain, but also to illness and disease. Many professional athletes have praised the results achieved through chiropractic. Joe Montana, quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers, was seen on national television getting treatment prior to the 1990 Superbowl.

Steve Santoro, a runner

for 11 years, feels "there is no question in my mind that chiropractic has supported my marathon training effectively." He initially sought help for an unrelated problem around the time he started to get into marathon running.

This type of endorsement has become commonplace among athletes due to the good results achieved through chiropractic.

The Santoros believe in a healthy lifestyle that includes regular exercise, proper nutrition, rest and chiropractic; preventive care that without the use of surgery or medication helps the natural ability of the body to heal itself.

Dr. Loughlin congratulates Steve and David for their great accomplishments and also for setting an example for a healthy lifestyle.
