OBITUARIES

The 1960s have long passed in its calendar, but the music of Sam Andriem's band, the group which he still fronts, endures. The multi-instrumentalist and singer has been making music since the age of 16, but says that what he loves about it is how much he can do on his own. "I can write, play guitar, sing, and do everything else," he says. "I'm very self-sufficient. I can do it all by myself. It's a great feeling." Andriem, 37, has been playing music for over 40 years. He has released several albums and has toured extensively. "I'm proud to be a part of the 1960s music scene," he says. "It's a great feeling to be part of something that has stood the test of time."
