The most difficult thing is to stop typing the way you are used to. If your acquaintance with the computer started with games, then most likely your left hand will automatically be pulled to the keys wasd, and the right and everything will be on your mouse. If you are not such a person, then most likely you are typing with your index fingers. These habits will have to be eliminated if you want to learn how to quickly type on the keyboard.

The next step is to re-position the fingers correctly on the keyboard. If you look closely at the keyboard, you will notice how the index fingers lie on each of the F keys and the J key. This will help you to position the other fingers correctly despite the keyboard.

It's simple, your index fingers should be on the keys F and J, and the other fingers will fall on the keyboard in a natural way.

In the image below you will notice the color field, showing the range of application for each finger.
