Key Takeaways

Naturally, my list of affiliate marketing blogs that have been successful blogs is dominated by personal financial matters. It's because the personal financial sector was also my primary niche in affiliate marketing that I understand well. Furthermore affiliate marketing in the realm of personal finance can be extremely profitable. However, it's definitely not the only field with the potential for earning money. Don't make your conclusion that you have to start a personal finance blog for success.

If you have any affiliate marketing websites that aren't in the personal finance industry that have been sold, please let me know via comment below. I'd like to add additional websites on this listing.

An even better idea is that most of these websites are blogs that review products. They will either review the products they are reviewing in their particular specialization, publish articles on comparisons or produce lists of products which highlight different vendors.

Another major aspect with this type of blog is the fact that they are based on SEO. Even if the blog owner uses other methods to drive readers to their site (i.e. paid traffic via social media, email and so on. ) The majority of websites depend on organic searches.

Conclusion

With the number of blogs that focus on affiliate marketing it's essential to seek out experts with demonstrated practical experience on the topic. Their experience will give you an insight into what you can do (and the things to avoid) to boost the income of your affiliate.
