As an example, Sushi Bar has been dumped. For awhile now in fact. I've had the rom set sitting on my computer for weeks. But playing Sushi Bar on some computer emulator program, or on some absolute piece of garbage frankensteined Naomi cartridge, is WORTHLESS! That is NOT what I want. And that is NOT what the real Atomiswave gamers & collectors want either. So until we figure out how to put these Proto romsets onto normal plug & play Atomiswave cartridges, there is no point to it. So let's focus on that. Let's figure that out. and then we can finally come full circle here.

Theoretically, we can use certain expensive released AW carts and reprogram them. None of these games are common.

Secondly, we could possibly use the bootlegs to do this as well since the protos do not use any kind of special banking. I would like to see the Chicago 1929 board to confirm it is the case with that cart too.

Waiting for a reply to the PM I sent you 😊

Just great the thread got moved to arcade central and now no ones talkin'. Why is this here and the other prototype threads are in "news and rumors"?

Anyway... Any updates for us shou?

All the players want to talk in PM, so there isn't much other discussion to have. There's a market for these if they get made - but that is in the hands of others.

I'm assuming VT moved it here, as it's not Neo Geo related.

Hopefully, Billy and Shou know where to look...

I'm sending you and Billy both the contact info for one of the AW boot makers in China. Hopefully something is possible here.

Oh man, I can't wait for this. Might be time to make Kenju cover art. Would love to run this at conventions and tournaments.

Looking for: Garou (MVS), Super Turbo (CPS2) or CPS2 multi.

There's no need, I have the original instructions and move strips. You will see it on location at 2 famous Tokyo arcades soon with live streams and tourneys.

I revealed new info on Kenju today on my Tumblr.

Kenju is now playable at Mikado and Try Tower in Tokyo. I have also given both arcade Force Five which is already up at Try.

I'm happy to post an update that Billy Pitt has graciously sent over the Chicago 1929 cart to me and I have successfully dumped it. It's also fully playable under emulation minus its link up feature as Demul does not support this functionality yet. NAOMI netbooting versions have almost been created for the protos but due to hardware differences, they are not 100% faithful. As such, we are now working on the first AW cart repro which will lead to a potential production run.

I hope this can serve as an example that professional and mature transactions are absolutely possible for protos.

Also, if anyone knows who has Premier Eleven, please PM me.

Fantastic news. I commend you gents for the collaboration efforts and look forward to the releases.

Also, I'd say reposting the release in particular to the news page again would be wise.

We've 90% reverse engineered the existing AW bootlegs so that we can reproduce our own carts without having to buy boots. Once this is complete, we will assemble the first prototypes and test them out.

brizzo was talking about this in chat the other week. Price point was like $600 or some crazy shit for their new bootlegs. Told him he'd have lots of buyers on here for far less, but none of us are paying that.

To quote muchspork, "wow."

Yeah - definitely happy to support the R & D, and the cost of production, but that seems way out there. I wasn't thinking $30 boots like ali used to have, but was more in the $150 range.

Yeah - definitely happy to support the R & D, and the cost of production, but that seems way out there. I wasn't thinking $30 boots like ali used to have, but was more in the $150 range.

I too would be interested at the $150 price range but $600 seems insane.
