Vigorous regarded as experts in their field, allied health professions fall into two broad categories -

technicians (assistants) and therapists/technologists. With education requirements and curriculum varying depending on the chosen field, academic prerequisites range from less than two years for technicians to a more intensive educational process for therapists and technologists that include acquiring procedural skills. With such explosive growth in allied health care career options and so many diverse fields from which to choose, it's no wonder students preparing for their future are seeking opportunities in allied health fields. Yet, with more than 5 million current allied health professions in the U.S. and more on the horizon, careful examination of the educational development and environment of emerging students identifies areas of needed improvement to meet the diverse needs of this ever-changing landscape.

Under Australia's Medicare program, any treatment that does not fall into the "emergency" category is considered to be elective, which places patients on a long public hospital waiting list to be seen. There are many differences between California health insurance and other states including how it is applied for. For example, while Blue Cross and Blue Shield are one company in other states, here in California, each is separate and applied to individually as Anthem Blue Cross of California and Blue Shield of California. California health insurance law AB 1672 is an improvement over the federal HIPAA law that covers all states in that it includes the following with regard to California group coverage:

Let me guide you through the maze of obtaining proper health insurance coverage for you, your family or business, with an individual or group plan based upon your specific needs. I will find the best coverage for your insurance dollar by analyzing the various plans of the major insurance companies I represent. My experience of having worked for insurance companies as a health insurance claims auditor and being an independent health insurance agent, gives me the advantage of knowing the health insurance business on both ends, from coverage to claims.

If you're an individual over 50 who has a pension and are looking to enhance your health coverage, comparing private insurance plans is a great start to learning all you need to know about securing your health policy options. Although all private insurers offer options for improved care above your Medicare supplement, each fund offers its own plan structures, coverage options, and premium costs, so it pays to compare.

Whether you are already facing additional medical services related to an age-related injury or illness, or you are simply planning ahead and making sure your health insurance coverage is adequate as a prudent measure, comparing plans and purchasing a private insurance policy can provide financial security if extra costs arise from medical services that are not covered by Medicare alone.

Seniors with a preexisting condition may face a waiting period of up to 12 months before their private coverage can be used for treatment. It is important to compare private health policies and determine which have waiting periods that may not work for you. Remember, no medical insurer can refuse to provide you with coverage based on your age or any preexisting conditions.

Your private medical plan may cover services specific to seniors that are not covered by Medicare, including ambulance costs, home nursing care, Podiatry services, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, cataract surgery and glasses, and more. It may be a wise idea to get a complete physical and discuss with your physician which health insurance features you should have in place to meet your specific medical needs.

Remember, the Australian government reimburses 30 percent of the cost of every private medical plan premium, a great incentive to make sure your health insurance coverage is adequate. And that percentage increases for seniors to 35 percent at age 65, and 40 percent at age 70, in order to make private coverage more affordable to aging citizens who are often living on a pension alone, with no other source of income. Those seniors who do have more income sources are still eligible for the same government reimbursement rates on private insurance premiums.
