

Objective of Conference

All of us understand the extraordinary importance of Pharmaceutical Sciences in next generation medicines. But we all recognize that as a scientific community we are not effectively translating the scientific discoveries into therapies, prevention, or cures. Despite unpredictable spending on basic research and development by Government as well as the Pharmaceutical, Biotechnology Industries, Research centers and Institutions the pipeline of new drugs is disturbingly dry.

There are numerous factors that is scientific, economic and regulatory but among these factors there must be a main one that how we think about drug candidates, discover new ones and how we evaluate when it comes to their benefit/risk profile. The aim of this seminar is to review past few years of the Essential Medicines movement and focus on the future of the essential medicine field with the concept "Next Generation Smart Medicines" of leaders. Our main aim behind this conference is to help prevent medicines and promising techniques from being discarded during drug development due to lack of tools to recognize their potential or because of out dated methods & review delay their access.
