Versatile in her expressions of creativity that emerge along the path to self-awareness, UK artist Liz Cirelli is redefining music with a multi-media twist as she invites the world to join her journey into the human psyche. Initially discovering her talent at the age of 11, Liz Cirelli grew into the epitome of a true musician with artistic ventures spanning genres and mediums to include DJing, producing, composing, writing, and much more.

Cirelli is well aware of the difficulties that often plague dream-chasers as they work tirelessly to seize the success buried within their passions. As the story goes for many fellow dreamers, before finding her stride as a musician, Cirelli found herself wrestling with the perceived reality that “you can’t make money from music” and for a period of time, chose to work as a yoga instructor instead. Teaching yoga acted as an enlightening force in the re-awakening and pursuit of her musical passion - which she soon took up again in full force.

In an eclectic combination of energy and grace, Cirelli’s leading influences upon her music have largely come from the underground electronic music scene in London - and a deep appreciation for classical music that stemmed from her family’s Italian heritage and her time spent training as a professional ballerina.

The intricate, hypnotic, textured sounds and songs that Liz creates find their foundations in her unique melodically-structured approach and innate ability to fuse the worlds of classical and electronic music. Adding her signature voice, she creates music that spans multiple genres including electronica, downtempo, and alternative dance.

As a producer, Liz has received national UK radio support on Scala Radio and has worked with Emmy-award winning composer, Gavin Greenaway and renowned violinist Minski (just recently celebrating her 10-year collaborative partnership with him). Other supporters of her music have been with such DJs as Hernan Cattaneo, Nick Warren, Sasha, Laurent Garnier, John Digweed and Henry Saiz.

As a composer, she wrote the soundtrack for the multi-award-winning short film, Triskelion and British independent feature film Art Is Dead. She has had a number of years in the world of writing music for advertising, with clients and projects including work for EMI

Production Music, 20th Century Fox, Nokia, Diesel, Bose, Sky TV, L'Oreal and directors Julian Schnabel and Stuart Birchall.

As a London-based Progressive House/Melodic Techno DJ, she played regular gigs at the legendary venues The End, Turnmills and The Cross and hosted a weekly radio show on House FM. Internationally, she has played festivals and has been hosted in Russia, Colombia, Hong Kong, Los Angeles, Morocco, Spain, and India.

Outside of music, Cirelli is a talented motivator and coach. She continues to inspire as many music lovers and creators as possible and has newly launched her music industry production course under the banner of The Cirelli School of Music.

Through her website and an active online presence, soul-searchers can also find a number of motivating resources at their disposal, including a newsletter and a beautiful free e-gift. Liz also offers a free online coaching community through her Facebook group, Daydream Believers. With as many as two thousand members, the group serves as an empowering platform of support and encouragement.

Whether you become an active member of her coaching community or prefer a musical approach to motivation, get ready to shake off stagnation and stir your soul because Liz Cirelli is taking creativity to new heights as she continues to awaken the world.
