

EVE Online Server Offline Due To DDOS Attack

About an hour ago just over an hour ago, the EVE Online login and website servers became unresponsive and went offline. A Twitter user claiming to be the person responsible for the significant PSN downtime earlier this month claims to be the one responsible for the EVE server's failure. According to the user, the DDOS is part of a string of attacks today that have also shut down the Minecraft login servers and The Escapist magazine's website.

CCP released an update on Facebook and Twitter stating that the issue is currently under investigation. "EVE Online, as well as the related services, are currently unavailable. JOHN'S BLOG We will return when we can after an investigation into some issues." CCP did not provide further information on the outage, but advised players to keep an eye on the EVE Twitter and Facebook feeds for any new news.