To make the transition from receiving the ball to directing it more fluid, don't trap or stop the ball completely. Instead, as the ball approaches, aim to make contact with the top or middle of the ball then tap it in the direction you want it to go and continue to maneuver down the field.

Learn how to anticipate where the ball is going during a game. You need to know when the ball is going towards you. You also need to know what to do when you do get the ball. Anticipating when you're defending is important, too. If you can foresee the opponent's next move, it increases your chances of stopping the movements.

should be committed to moving the ball across the field as often as possible. This will help space to open up and will give your team a better chance of scoring a goal. If your team is struggling to do this, watch footage of professional soccer teams. It should give you an idea of what you need to be doing.

When shooting a penalty kick scrutinize the goalie. Find an open spot that he does not have guarded and kick using the inside of your foot. Keep your non kicking foot close to the ball and your body over the ball. Then with your eyes on the ball, kick forcefully.

Make sure you are juggling the ball frequently so that you can improve your ball-handling skills. Juggling a soccer ball requires a lot of precision, and the only way to improve at this is practicing regularly. In addition, you should try improving other skills while juggling, such as passing, shooting, and trapping. For instance, juggle the ball some and then shoot the ball without allowing the ball to touch the ground.

When you are playing soccer, it is important for you to make split decisions and play the ball very quickly. If you take too long to think about each and every one of your plays, this will allow the opposing team to swoop in and take control of the ball.

If you want to receive a pass in soccer, go to an open spot of the field. You should be constantly on the move, even when you don't have the ball. This gives you an opportunity to find a spot where you can receive a strategic pass, and possibly a shot on goal.

Keep up your confidence when you're playing soccer. Success in soccer is as much in your head as it is in your feet. This is a mental game, and you are much more likely to succeed if you are confident and really believe you can win. When you're ready to take a shot, be confident you'll succeed rather than worrying about missing.

Work on decreasing your weaknesses instead of increasing your strengths when it comes to soccer. Although this seems counter productive, it will actually help you improve your game. By working on improving your weaknesses, you will learn how to improve your strengths by using the techniques you learned when improving your soccer weaknesses.

Soccer is a fun but methodical sport. You cannot expect to score every few minutes like in basketball. One mistake many teams make is several players flocking towards the ball. Provide space to your teammates if they have the ball. The best strategy is to triangulate and also keep a player behind the person who has the ball.

Make sure that you do everything you can to stay centered on the ball. If you allow the ball to get away, there is a good chance that this will allow you to get thrown off balance. Centering the ball will give you the ability to move in any direction with it.
